This seminar series will present current research on human and non-human primate evolution, covering a wide range of topics that include human population history, human genetic variation, selection on the human genome, behavioral genetics, and the link between medicine and biological concepts of race.

Risk, resilience, and gene X environment interactions in primates

April 19
4p.m. in 2117 MERF

Steve Suomi
National Institutes of Health (NIH)