This seminar series will present current research on human and non-human primate evolution, covering a wide range of topics that include human population history, human genetic variation, selection on the human genome, behavioral genetics, and the link between medicine and biological concepts of race.

A genomic analysis of worldwide human variation and it’s evolutionary history

April 5
4p.m. in 2117 MERF

Noah Rosenberg
University of Michigan